Účel cesty/Aim of travel: Attending 15th Tetrahedron Symposium and presenting poster

Účastník/Participant: Claire McMaster

Doba trvání cesty/Duration of travel: 22nd June – 30th June

Místo/Location: Millennium Gloucester Hotel, South Kensington, London

Zpráva/Report:

I attended interesting lectures covering a range of topics including chemical biology, synthetic chemistry, drug design and discovery and drug delivery. I found these talks to be inspiring and intend to incorporate some of the chemistry presented into my future work. Of particular interest to me were the talks by Brian Stoltz about ‘complex natural products as a driving force for discovery in organic chemistry’, and by Chaitan Khosla about ‘an inflammatory disulfide bond switch’.

Over two days and 3 sessions I presented my work in the form of a poster, entitled ‘Efficient Solid-Phase Synthesis of Benzo[e]imidazo [1,2-b][1,2,4]thiadiazin-2-one 5,5-dioxides’. This gave me the opportunity to showcase my work to attendees of the symposium. Not only was I able to promote the work that we are doing at the University, I was also given helpful suggestions by others working in a similar field on how to further improve my synthesis.

During the poster sessions when I wasn’t presenting my work, I read the posters of other participants from around the world. I was delighted to find some information on one poster about hydrazine chemistry, that is relevant to the project that I am currently working on.

I used the time given for refreshments to network with other attendees of the conference. This gave me the chance to discuss my work in an informal setting and lay the foundations for future collaborations.
